Description:

After making a fatal mistake on the job, Lina Zuendel seeks shelter in a Seattle assisted-living facility as their live-in nurse. But peace is not what she finds. She soon hears tales of ghosts haunting the house, and of two tragic deaths that took place in the 1930s. Unexplained events send her to ask questions of the handsome resident houseboy. Ren Schultz, a seemingly young live-in houseboy, tries to avoid his growing attraction to the new nurse. His secrets are too dangerous to share, no matter how lonely he has become. But Lina is persistent, and soon uncovers dark truths that no one else has dared to face. As their attraction grows, so does the intensity of the paranormal activity. Can their love survive the mysteries that lurk in the old sorority house?

This is a ghost story that warms the heart more than it tingles the spine, which suits me just fine. I related to Lina, the protagonist, as soon as she facetiously blamed Stephen King for her predicament. The author paints Lina with a realistic pallet of emotions that will be instantly recognizable to young, single women everywhere. As with any story involving the supernatural, this one requires significant suspension of belief, the sweet love story makes it worthwhile. The story gets a bit murky near the end when it strains to achieve a satisfying all well that ends well resolution, but Ms. Ringle nevertheless manages to bring new life to an old ghost. I enjoyed the ride.
