Description:

Blossoms Disappear Green contains everyday poems for everybody about pretty much everything. From daily observations to mystical realizations, subjects range from the dietary habits of geckos to the process of personal liberation. With humor and honesty, these poems direct one back to their heart, to shrug off yourself. There is some truth in this book, and some silliness. Free Sample: Reincarnation? - how else to explain the tight perm. Tyler Matthew Francisco lives in Mito, Japan, where he teaches English and Hatha Yoga. Formally a potter, his education resides in Fine Arts. And, of course, he has waited tables too.

Blossoms Disappear Green is a book of concise and witty poems by a weird looking person. Francisco is an insightful observer of people, places, and things. Reading his poems is like remembering something you forgot - they are familiar, honest, funny, and original. I love everything about this book.
